Mac OS X version is available in 32-bit and 64-bit versions, since 2011. On November 5, 2018, Autodesk released AutoCAD LT 2018.0 on the Mac App Store. As of 2019, there are no plans to release an iOS version. AutoCAD 2012 was the first version to use a visual scripting language called Visual LISP (Visual LISP for AutoCAD). AutoCAD 2012 included two editions, Professional and Architectural. Visual LISP was a programming language used to create macros to automate parts of the user interface. Visual LISP was removed in AutoCAD 2013, but remained in Architectural. AutoCAD 2013 was the first release to include a programming environment built on top of Microsoft.NET technology, AutoLISP. AutoLISP provided a C#-like syntax and a complete set of class libraries which are able to communicate with the Visual LISP environment. AutoLISP is not present in AutoCAD 2014 and later releases. Instead, users can use Visual Basic.NET, Visual C++, Visual J# or Visual C# to automate AutoCAD. AutoCAD 2013 includes two editions, Professional and Architectural. AutoLISP is no longer in the Architectural edition. Editions The following table lists the editions available for download as of May 2018.
