. With the advent of multimedia, interactivity has become one of the most effective tools for information. The present invention relates to a new and distinct cultivar of Portulaca plant, botanically known as Portulaca quinquefolia, and hereinafter referred to by the name 'Fisparin'. The new Portulaca plant is a product of a planned breeding program conducted by the Inventor in Frewville, Pa. The objective of the breeding program is to create new compact Portulaca plants with numerous attractive flowers. The new Portulaca plant originated from a cross-pollination made by the Inventor in Frewville, Pa., in 2004 of a proprietary selection of Portulaca quinquefolia identified as code number P2, not patented, as the female, or seed, parent with a proprietary selection of Portulaca quinquefolia identified as code number P8, not patented, as the male, or pollen, parent. The new Portulaca plant was discovered and selected by the Inventor as a single flowering plant from within the progeny of the stated cross-pollination in a controlled greenhouse environment in Frewville, Pa., in 2005. Asexual reproduction of the new Portulaca plant by divisions in a controlled greenhouse environment in Frewville, Pa., since 2005, has shown that the unique features of this new Portulaca plant are stable and reproduced true to type in successive generations. Combination therapy with epidermal growth factor and fibroblast growth factor-2 accelerates healing of diabetic foot ulcers. This study evaluated the effect of combination therapy with epidermal growth factor (EGF) and fibroblast growth factor-2 (FGF-2) on ulcer healing in a rat model of diabetic foot ulcers. A total of 24 diabetic rats were divided into four groups: group 1 (diabetic control), group 2 (diabetic plus EGF), group 3 (diabetic plus FGF-2), and group 4 (diabetic plus EGF and FGF-2). After application of the burn, the wounds were covered with methylene blue gel to determine ulcer surface areas and to identify the percentages of the full, partial, and healed wound areas. Wound surface areas in group 1 were significantly greater than those in groups 2, 3, and 4. The percentage of the total and partial wound areas in group 1 were also significantly higher than those in 6d1f23a050
