The app was running fine (with Tomcat 6.0), but I have to move to an Eclipse with Tomcat 7.0, since the new version of Spring support me easily. Now I can't find the /context-root/web-app/WEB-INF/applicationContext.xml file. I can't load spring beans. In Eclipse, in the configuration of the context, I've added a new context-loader as follows: contextConfigLocation classpath:*/*/context.xml org.springframework.web.context.ContextLoaderListener Now I have configured the context, when I start Tomcat, the context is not found. Any ideas? A: Finally I solved the problem. The applicationContext.xml was loaded but the beans weren't instantiated. It was a confusion between applicationContext.xml and the ContextLoaderListener. In applicationContext.xml, I had to define the beans, not the ContextLoaderListener. In the configurator of the ContextLoaderListener, I had to define the beans. Thanks to all.
