ALBANY, New York -- An appellate court has reinstated a second lawsuit claiming that a man can be kicked to death just for being gay. The state's highest court Thursday sided with plaintiff Gregory Schaffer, of Spring Valley, New York. His lawsuit, which was first dismissed two years ago by a lower court, says Schaffer was assaulted by an NYPD officer after being wrongfully arrested while walking down the street. The ruling reverses a previous one by a different judge, who threw out the case. But the court says the earlier ruling was "clearly mistaken." Schaffer and John Geer sued the city for violating their rights. Schaffer is believed to be the first man in New York to sue under a state anti-discrimination law for discrimination based on sexual orientation.

Q: Preventing multiple clicks I have a "submit" button which redirects the user to an error page (403). After the user closes the browser, he can click the submit button again, leading to the error page again. How can I prevent this? So far I've tried: `if(isset($_GET['submit'])){ echo "Submit was already clicked, go back to error page"; }`

A: Try the following: `$_SESSION['clicked'] = true; $_SESSION['resume'] = false; // false if the error was 404, true if was 403 header('Location:..'); exit;`

Q: iOS: How do I determine the Text of the Label in a UITableViewCell? I have the following UITableViewCell in a UITableView. How do I determine the Text of the Label on the left to send that text to the next view controller? Here's the code in the `cellForRowAtIndexPath:` method: `NSString *dataLabel = (NSString *)[[tableData objectAtIndex:indexPath.section] objectAtIndex:indexPath.row];` tableData is a
