again.[Effects of
enalapril and captopril
on myocardial
contractile function].
The studies were carried out on 18 male white rats in a semi-open model of haemorrhagic shock

with and without concomitant
catecholamine
blockage using alphaand beta-
adrenoblocker agents:

enalapril and captopril.
The animals were divided into groups of 6 rats each. Changes of the systolic and diastolic left
ventricular (LV)
performance were measured by a miniaturized ball and

string ventricular
gauges and their values were registered
before and after treatment. Analysis of results revealed that both beta-blockers in doses of 5 mg/kg and 20 mg/kg administered 10 minutes before the

initiation of shock
improved the diastolic LV performance. The treatment was effective with enalapril
in the dose of 5 mg/kg, which in turn was more effective in improving the systolic LV performance in comparison with the same dose of captopril. The therapy was also effective in lowering the LV stiffness. A conclusion is drawn that the blockade of the RAAS system prior to the initiation of haemorrhagic shock

leads to more effective improvement of the
ventricular
performance, as well as to reduction of the myocardial
